- When goods and services do not have the claimed use, usefulness or benefit;
- When products / services do not have the claimed warranty / guarantee;
- When the price of product or service is misleading.
- False and misleading advertisement of selling at bargain price.
- Offering gifts, prizes, etc. to lure customers with no intention of providing them.
- Selling goods which do not fall within the safety standards set up by competent authority.
- Hoardings or destroying goods with the intention of raising the cost of these or similar goods manufactured in greater number so as to manipulate higher prices.
- Manufacturing or offering spurious goods or adopting deceptive practices in the provision of services.

"Goods once sold will not be taken back"
or
"No exchange",
or
"No refund under any circumstances"

It amounts to Unfair Trade Practice and does not carry any legal weight.

Consumer protection

Consumer protection is a group of laws enacted to protect the rights of consumers, fair trade, competition and accurate information in the market place. The laws are designed to prevent the businesses that engage in unfair practices from gaining an advantage over competitors. They may also provide additional protection for those most vulnerable in society. Consumer protection laws are a form of government regulations that aim to protect the rights of consumers. For example, a government may require businesses to disclose detailed information about products—particularly in areas where safety or public health is an issue, such as food.

Consumer protection is linked to the ideas of consumer rights and to the formation of consumer organisations, which helps consumers make better choices in the marketplace and get help with consumer complaints. Other organisations that promote consumer protection include government organisations and self-regulating business organisations.
